THE INFINITE CONCEPT OF COSMIC CREATION

Advanced Lesson Course. Lesson 4: Cosmic Cycle of Creation, Presenting Creative Principles Involving the Formation of Universes, Galaxies, Stars, Suns, Atoms and Man

In the previous lessons we entered into various discussions which presented to you certain general creative principles which involved the formation of universes, galaxies, stars, suns, atoms, etc. Let us now enter into a discussion of creation which is much more pertinent to you in a personal way; for you, like all mankind, have followed this same pathway of creative evolution, which has been only partially comprehended. This evolution has also been mistakenly called reincarnation in certain vague and undetermined Eastern philosophies.

There are many stories and versions of the creation of man being currently circulated; some in religious beliefs, others in the more scientific fields of general anthropology. More than 800 million Christians are quite familiar with the Garden of Eden story of creation which is found in the Book of Genesis in the Bible. It is incomprehensible that perhaps several hundred million of these Christians accept this story in its complete literal form. It is evident that this story contains very obvious disparities and contradictions which are quite apparent to anyone who has not been mesmerized by his fanatical religious beliefs. The date of this supposed creation has been definitely "established" by certain well-known historical religious figures, as having taken place 4002 B.C. and one of these church expressionists went so far as to establish the exact week, day and hour.

In complete contradiction to this fantastic and ridiculous supposition, the science of anthropology points out various skeletal remains; skulls and bone fragments, etc., which definitely establishes, from their point of view, the evolution or creation of man as starting more than a million years ago. Pithecanthropus erectus, or the Java man, achieved wide notoriety some years ago, as he walked about the jungle floor about 600,000 B.C.; others such as the Zinj skull found in Africa, dates back about one million years B.C.

In the Garden of Eden story, some attempts have been made to justify its very apparent disparities and contradictions. However, this story does not refer to the creation of man but actually refers to the beginning of the Lemurian Age, the serpent symbolizing the sine wave bringing to the spiritual man and woman born into the more material world, the various transpositions of life which, as we have explained to you, are all carried by these sine wave energies. Your five senses function as carriers or purveyors of these various wave form impulses, such as sight, sound, smell, taste and touch. How utterly ridiculous then is this Garden of Eden story. Why would some fancied god create a man from mud, then create a woman from a rib of this man; then after they were created as man and woman, become extremely angry at them when they behaved as man and woman. And if he had not wanted them to be fruitful and bear children, then where would he get his 144,000 selected from the countless billions who have swarmed upon the earth? And why would a god, intelligent enough to create a man from mud and a woman from a rib, be content with 144,000 people, for by comparison to our many large American cities, this god would be much less in stature than any one of the mayors of these cities?

While we are asking questions on these religious beliefs, what happens to the countless millions of “sinners” who have been forgiven by the various Catholic priests and should be, theoretically, just as fit as anyone to live in the supposed heavenly City of Jerusalem. In view of these many apparent contradictions in both the creation and ultimate evolution of mankind, Christianity, like all other religions, becomes a tinsel fabric of lies and suppositions, unfounded and entirely unrealistic.

Science also, in any of its various branches such as anthropology or biological evolution, is quite incomplete. For instance Darwinism, which won such wide acclaim in the beginning of the twentieth century, postulates the theory of evolution as a set of certain factors such as environment, heredity, natural selection, etc., as being the dominant factors of evolution and which presupposes all such evolution as taking place on the surface of the earth or the third, material dimension; whereas the truth is, all forms of evolutionary changes seen in the various fauna and flora of this earth are only surface appearances or byproducts of a great and continuous "spiritual" evolutionary metamorphosis which is taking place in the adjacent dimensions.

Like all other plant and animal species, man also does not have a beginning or starting point; such a starting point would relate to the actual beginning. You, like everyone else, started your life and evolution at some different and undetermined point in the vast spiritual cosmogony.

Starting with such comparatively simple energy aggregates as the atom, these began a certain cyclic fourth dimensional evolution, resolving first into a small vortex of energy which re-expressed itself in a common terminating point in the third dimension as a cell, such as might be seen in the common amoeba. These fourth dimensional vortexes, each expressing cell structures, then began to spiritually (4th dimensionally) evolve or to combine with themselves, forming groups of cells. These groups of cells began forming certain plant and animal life as the terminating third dimensional expression. On the fourth dimensional side, these various group vortexes again combined and recombined to form more advanced species of plant and animal life on the third dimensional side, or earth life.

At this point a very definite principle enters into our hypotheses; this principle is called polarization. When any of these plants or animals which were so expressing their earth life as a common terminating point for these fourth dimensional aggregates which we will call the psychic anatomy, they were being subjugated by certain energy waves called harmonics. These harmonic wave forms oscillated into the psychic anatomies and caused certain changes to take place in the wave form grouping of the vortexes. Certain other fourth dimensional harmonics were thus recreated which oscillated into other nearby unrelated vortexes causing, in turn, another set of harmonic regenerations. This regeneration process created with these various harmonic wave forms, so generated a new and different set of vortexes which were drawn into or firmly attached to the respective psychic anatomies from whence this regeneration sprang.

Thus the psychic anatomy grew or evolved and over periods of thousands of earth years, any plant or animal was able to evolve or change its physical earth life appearance and habits. This is the true pattern of evolution. It is taking place today just as it has always been taking place since the "beginning", and there is actually no beginning; we are only assuming a certain theoretical point of beginning. This then, is your pattern of evolution from some undetermined point in the infinite cosmogony as a simple vortex of energy where you began to create and recreate yourself in numerous earth life forms.

As you followed this pattern, you drew into your ever-expanding psychic anatomy the various attributes of earth life expressions which were always regenerated by the various environmental conditions, experiences, etc., in these numerous earth life expressions. Thus your psychic anatomy learned how to create and recreate certain earth life physical bodies which could eat, breathe, run, climb, etc., and do all the other countless thousands of things associated with various earth life dispensations.

Finally your psychic anatomy began to evolve into another and somewhat different position to the infinite cosmogony. These various earth life experiences, while they were being compounded as wave forms in your psychic anatomy, began to regenerate a sort of a second psychic anatomy.

This second psychic anatomy or vortex began to draw into itself various and different intelligence quotients which were being expressed from the center of the vast infinite cosmogony. After a long period of regeneration, this second psychic anatomy grew into the proportions of what we call the Superconscious or the Higher Self. In more advanced personalities this Superconscious is actually an individual facsimile of the entire Infinite Cosmogony.

However, in the case of most people, this Superconscious has been only partially developed and has not yet become the dominant or expressive psychic anatomy. It is through this Superconscious psychic anatomy that any person begins to function in an infinite way. This is what Jesus referred to as finding the Kingdom of Heaven within. The Father or Christ was, of course, this Superconscious Self which dwells or lives in the vast Infinite Cosmogony or Kingdom. It is in the knowledge of or the belief in the Superconscious—God or Christ Self—which will gradually enable you to evolve from your earth lives and to begin to live in the Kingdom, for with the greater amount of knowledge of the Superconscious will also come a greater proportion of influence into your daily life and subsequently, a greater degree of perfection, freedom from disease, want and insecurity.

This is the true development of what has been loosely referred to by various religious dispensations as the soul or spirit and the evolution and progressive growth of this psychic anatomy or soul is also the true evolution of every human being and which, incidentally, was taught by Jesus 2000 years ago in the idiom of that time.

In view of this factual scientific evolution, how ridiculous and asinine then do various religious beliefs become. The creation of man from mud and woman from a rib is matched only in asininity to the supposed millennium and resurrection; for here again reason, logic and purpose is defeated and intelligence reverts back to the childlike mind of the savage barbarian. How unintelligent would it be to create a man or woman, and from them countless billions of people, then to destroy most of them because they were actually learning about the Infinite or trying to become godlike through the doorway of experience, trial, effort and retrial. How utterly fantastic would any such godlike rendition be to kill off all the earth people in a great tidal wave of flame; then somehow, nursing their spiritual effigies through a thousand-year millennium, resurrect them in physically reconstituted bodies, only to again strike them down and destroy them—save only 144,000!

Science also has no answer to the beginning or the end of life as it concerns mankind, individually or collectively. Science offers no reason for the creation of any visible or tangible object. It does not know how or why the Universe was created; no more than it knows why or how the 30 billion suns or stars and almost countless planetary systems which comprise our galaxy were so created. And while our galaxy represents only one of some 600,000 million such known galaxies in the great Universe, the Universe too, becomes only one small speck in the vast Infinite macrocosm. And with all this vast incalculable display of astronomical configurations, space becomes meaningless.

At its supposed speed of 186,000 miles per second, it would take light 100,000 light years to pass from edge to edge through our galaxy. Tonight astronomers are looking at universes and seeing some of them as they were more than 800 million light years ago. Through their radio telescopes, they are beginning to probe into the vast unknown space to distances more than 25 billion light years away; and yet they are just beginning.

Yes, and even here is a great contradiction. In his theory of the space-time continuum, Einstein mathematically proved that light could and did accelerate many times the initial earth velocity speed of 186,000 miles per second. What then becomes of these astronomical calculations based on this known speed? It is also known that this vast space is curved. In fact the curvature has been theoretically measured. Does this space curvature then indicate the truth in our general hypothesis that all fourth dimensional configurations resolve themselves into cyclic motions?

Just as the astronomer has to some extent proved the vast infinity of the macrocosm, so has the nuclear physicist begun to prove the vast invisible microcosm—the world of the atom; for atoms, too, are just as wondrous as the universe and distances between atomic constituents are just as vast and great in proportion as they are in astronomical configurations. One atom can and does represent space in as great a proportion as does our solar system. While your body is composed of countless billions of these tiny atoms, other free electronic particles, called cosmic rays, pass through your body at the rate of thousands per second; yet you can go from birth to death without one of them actually striking you.

So you see, dear student, your body, your world and your heavens are only tangible to you on the basis of reactive comparisons which you have established in countless millions of earth life experiences, lived in many thousands of earth lives. When you have, as is the common pattern of all men, passed on into the spiritual worlds or fourth dimension in between these earth lives, there you will again begin to take up your previous spiritual life and where you can compare and reevaluate earth life experiences and in these comparisons, set up and establish certain well-defined objectives to be attained and realized in your next earth life incarnation. Then when you are again born into the material world, you will find yourself working out these various patterns and objectives to again attain certain polarization with the higher Superconscious Self.

This then is your true evolution; the real reason and purpose is contained in this evolution, for in your countless earth life experiences you are polarizing into your Superconscious Self a definite facsimile of this same configuration of idea, form or consciousness which is a part of the vast Infinite Cosmogony and which the Christian religionist calls God. This is, incidentally, quite different from that personal god configuration called Jehovah who is actually the old Babylonian god Jahweh, perpetuated to the Christian through Father Abraham, who led the children of Israel out of the ancient land of Chaldea more than 2000 years B.C. This same Jehovah was a vindictive, hateful, lustful, emotional, vengeful, murderous god who committed mass murder, adultery, fornication and various other emotional vicissitudes. How strange indeed that we, his children, could not commit even a small fraction of any of these sinful purposes without being condemned to some fiery hell! Are we then to live a more exemplary life than God? And, if so, why do we have such a God? If we are more perfect than this God and live more perfectly, then what will His Kingdom of Heaven be like?

In these various comparisons, it now becomes quite obvious what was meant in the first lesson where it was suggested that your true evolution should begin by abandoning these various religious beliefs. Political systems too, as they are so concerned with various governmental agencies and functions, are equally dogmatic and rhetorical, yet most necessary to the masses of humanity who have not yet ascended to that dimension of personal introspection wherein they begin to visualize the vast Infinite Cosmogony and the freedom of mind which must be attained before cohesive function can be established with this Infinite. When such function is established with any individual, he automatically becomes very godlike in his personal expressions which are always counterparts of this Infinite.

Throughout these various rhetorical systems, dogmas and creeds found in religion and government as well as such incidental and incumbent social expressions and intercourses which are so currently being expressed, are found the same pedantic and pedagogic restrictions which demand that the individual confine the circumference of his life within the confines of these conformities and curriculums.

It is quite obvious under these conditions that all minds must assume a parrot-like expression of life and that any creative spontaneity was more or less repressed because such expressionists would not dare to go beyond the confines of these generally accepted conformities. Strange indeed that mankind has in posterity eulogized and heroized numerous personalities who have dared go beyond these circumferences, yet in many instances such eulogies and worshipful hero attitudes took place after the individual expressionist had been violently put to death for his cause.

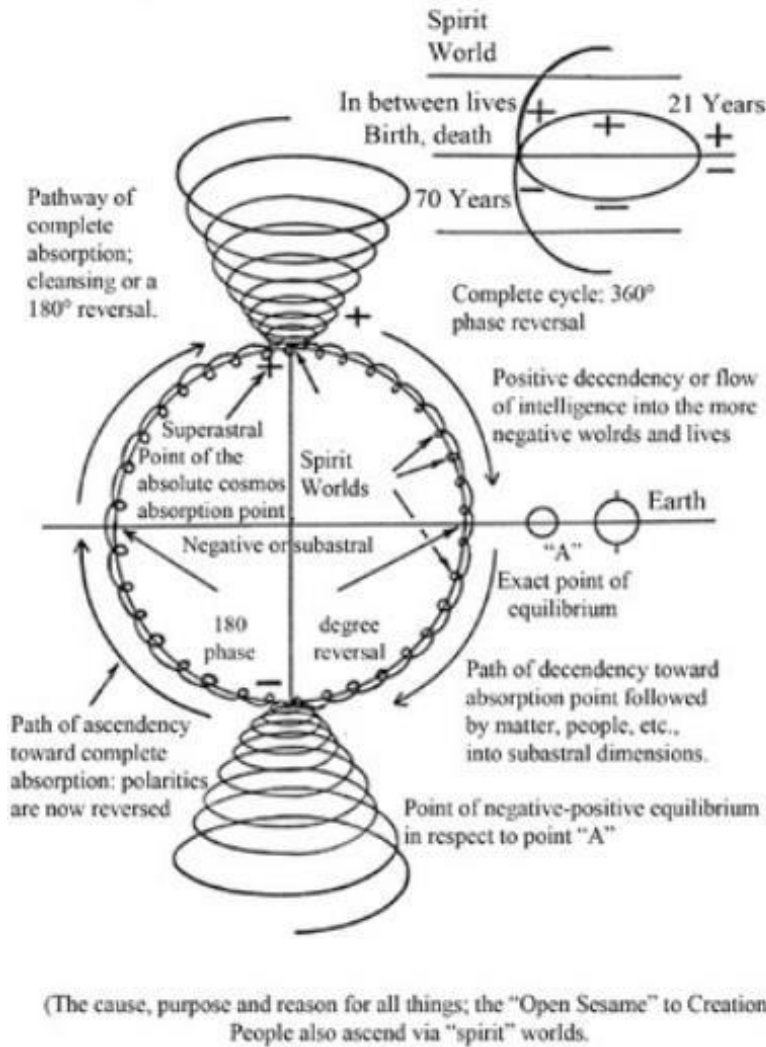

Jesus is worshipped by hundreds of millions, yet He was put to death for the same teachings which are now part of the great Christian eulogy. Joan of Arc was recently canonized and made a saint by the same diocese who burned her at the stake. It might be pointed out that many of the same judges, executioners and people who called out "Crucify Him," are now "good Christians", and through the doorway of reincarnation they have come back at this time to preach and worship for His Cause.

However, we must not deviate from the pursuance of a true educational format in these lessons. Historical and philosophical comparisons always add depth to our understanding.

Continuing in this lesson, the exact configuration and functioning of the psychic anatomy will be described to you.

Since we have presented the more philosophical preamble to evolution, let us now proceed with the actual basic mechanics involved in all evolutionary patterns. Plants, animals, man, planets, solar systems, galaxies, universes and all evolutionary patterns can be more thoroughly understood when we obtain an insight into these principles.

THE CYCLE OF CREATION

Consulting the diagram, you will see we have drawn a large circle and interwoven into this circle is a spiraling line which follows the complete circumference of the circle. Starting at point 1, let us proceed clockwise around this circle and see what happens. Remember first, however, that this circle represents sort of an algebraic equivalent or a formula and is not the actual element involved but rather, relates to the behavior patterns of various elements. In this respect then, this creative cycle can be actually synthesized into the behavior patterns of all evolutionary forms of animate or inanimate objects which you find about you here or in any other world and at any other future time.

In various texts of Unarius, frequent reference has been made to the Infinite, which the Christian calls God. This Infinite is the sum and total of everything known to you and all other human beings, and the Infinite is part of all things, not only in the worlds you know about, but far beyond the reach of your imagination. In fact, you will never arrive at the terminating place where you can say that you know all about this Infinite;

even though you live a hundred million more lifetimes involving billions of years, you will have only begun to understand this Infinite.

For purposes best served at the present moment however, we must confine our introspection into a comparatively simple equation which is the reason for the spiraling circle in the diagram. Starting from point 1 at the top, the spiraling line will then represent the sum and total of the Infinite. Within the dimension of this line, we will find, electronically speaking an exact facsimile of everything contained within the Infinite. This is what Jesus referred to as the Kingdom of Heaven. These various facsimiles are actually forms of consciousness, some of which you are intercepting at the present moment in your daily life.

As this infinite number of forms of consciousness spiral downward in our circle, the various spirals represent various planes or dimensions where some particular group of conscious forms link together and create a certain specified circumference of life such as is seen in your daily earth life, which is a certain limited number of these infinite forms manifesting themselves as atomic constituents and their associated reactionary patterns, combined with other dynamically moving energy forms expressed as sight, sound, light, heat, etc.

This then brings us to point A, for here in the circumference of the planet earth, we find that there is a certain defined point of equilibrium established in the form of the so-called mass elements of this world into which is constantly flowing part of the stream of this Infinite.

Referring again to a certain principle which we now understand, this is the positive flowing into the negative for a certain length of time. The negative then becomes positive and discharges itself into the next succeeding or lower dimension. This is called a pulse or beat, or a certain frequency, if you like. This flow of positive to negative and the negative, now a positive charge flowing into the next lower succeeding dimension, completes a cycle; the point of equilibrium being always maintained in that exact moment of birth and rebirth, we shall say, of the positive and negative-positive discharge condition. On the right-hand side of our circle, you will see another diagram shaped like a large loop, an enlarged version of the many loops found on our circle. You will see that the exact joining place of the loop is the point of birth and death, or charge and discharge. You will also see how this Infinite is flowing down into this loop circle, then when it becomes fully charged or completes half of the cycle, it will then complete the other half of the cycle by discharging into the lower dimension.

At this point we must enter into another equation which must be understood before we can complete this concept of creation. This charge-discharge condition we have just described is made possible only when certain conditions are met. These conditions are called polarization. This means that a pathway must be cleared from the lower dimension before the discharge condition can take place. This pathway can be better visualized, so far as human beings are concerned, as the inward knowing (sometimes called faith) of the higher spiritual worlds. In other words, it is sort of a compatible relationship which has been established between two different dimensions by the regeneration of a certain set of harmonics which act as a link between these two different dimensions. Let us now see what happens in the birth-death cycle of a human being.

We shall start in the spiritual world just above the earth plane (A). This is the inner dimension of this human being or the kingdom in which this psychic anatomy always lives. A point of reference to this psychic anatomy must be maintained. As this spiritual world is the sum and total of the Infinite, the psychic anatomy will consequently, on the basis of frequency, tune itself into such energy wave forms which comprise this Infinite as are compatible to it. This is done in certain portions of the psychic anatomy we have called the Superconscious.

It is easy to see, therefore, that any individual can live in a spiritual world which is either a hell-hole of misunderstanding, nonconformities of consciousness, etc., or he can be tuned into a very beautiful spiritual world. In either case there is a lack of knowledge or a considerable amount of knowledge. That is why we stress such great importance on learning what this Infinite is.

Now this discarnate entity or psychic anatomy wishes to return to the physical world; it does this because it is only concerned with the memory of other earth lives. It knows little or nothing about the great Infinite spiritual worlds about it and so it enters into the physical world via the womb. Rising upward on our loop in a clockwise fashion, this psychic anatomy grows into childhood and into adulthood. As he progresses physically, this physical progression draws him further and further away from the infinite attributes which have entered into this life cycle from the other direction, counterclockwise. So the more this person becomes conscious of the physical worlds, the further away he gets from the spiritual worlds. This is always the way in which the equilibrium is maintained in that oscillating positive to negative process.

As this person progresses along his life cycle, he becomes more conscious of the other more spiritual side of his nature. As this spiritual nature progresses upward it will, figuratively speaking, meet at this junction of life called the middle 40's. At this point the very strong sexual libido begins to fade. The need for procreation has been met; the physical life and its various appurtenances assume less importance. Now the physical life progresses downward or diminishes while the spiritual side progresses upward and grows.

At the bottom of the cycle the physical anatomy begins to disintegrate; the elements in this body begin to revert, spiritually speaking, upward into the higher inner dimensions. At the highest point of this cycle, this person will now become more spiritually aware than he has ever been before in his life. This creates the conscious desire to live in some higher spiritual world; a desire prompted by the psychic memory of his spiritual life in between worlds, sleep teaching, etc.

With this desire for higher life, there is also the desire to abandon the physical body. This causes the general depreciation of physical consciousness which then assumes a negative position and begins traveling downward into the subastral worlds where these physical conformities of consciousness will gradually evolve downward through many subastral dimensions until they reach the absorption point.

Passing that absorption point, they begin to have their negative biases changed. They are being reabsorbed, so to speak; they are being absorbed back into the Infinite. Before they can be completely absorbed, they must pass through many other dimensions wherein these various forms of physical consciousness which may still remain in these energy wave forms are completely eliminated.

This is done by associating them or bringing them in contact with completely opposite configurations of consciousness. If the person who originally possessed and formed these various physical conscious forms tunes into them, through space and time, he would actually be in "hell". Therefore, hell can be said to exist for any human being who persists in maintaining consciousness from the negative or physical side which has reversed the life cycle previously described.

In other words, the physical consciousness contained in the psychic anatomy travels downward instead of progressively upward. The more lives he lives clinging to the physical, the more often he is reverted on this downward trail and consequently the more he has to rely on his past lifetimes which have passed on into the cleansing section of the cycle.

Now you can see he is voluntarily tuning himself into these past lifetime forms which by this time contain opposite biases or forms. This poor person's psychic sees only the nightmarish and ghoulish apparitions and he is actually in hell because nothing adds up. There are no clear pictures, no conformities; everything is completely opposite and different. The understanding of this downward psychic evolution presents other possibilities. Let us take a specific example of a certain individual who has acquired a great deal of knowledge of this psychic evolution. He has progressed upward to a point where he has become the equivalent of a Master such as Jesus. At this point he is tempted to use his power and knowledge selfishly instead of maintaining a constantly expanding relationship with the Infinite in his progressive evolution.

At this point when he succumbs to temptation, he is not consciously aware that he is beginning to contrive his wisdom into various selfish purposes. He therefore reverses his evolution and begins the downward trail. He soon begins to learn of his predicament, but foolishly he also believes he has the power and wisdom to continue on this trail and to completely change all natural evolutionary patterns in respect to his own position. The Temptation on the Mount illustrates how Jesus was tempted; the "devil", his physical desires.

For a time then, at least, as he continues this downward evolution, he will actually grow or gain strength in his downward evolutionary purpose. This he does by becoming parasitic or vampirish. From the various subastral worlds in which he now finds himself, he begins to draw to him various individual psychic anatomies with which he has formerly associated. If he was formerly an Egyptian priest, he will draw to him various psychic anatomies of people who have bowed down before him and pledged their allegiance to him. Unfortunately, these poor spiritual entities are still revolving in their life-death cycles as they have done for thousands of years. They have lacked the knowledge and incentive to progress, for in this progression as in all other fourth dimensional concepts, time means nothing. Progression or retrogression is attained and sustained only as a completion of various cycles immediately concerned with the individual.

In this manner, therefore, untold billions of human beings are imprisoned in their psychic patterns, repeating themselves endlessly because they cannot adapt themselves progressively. The subastral worlds are actually filled with these discarnate entities. Eventually they will be absorbed back into the Infinite if they do not succeed in reversing their downward cycle, for nothing remains stationary. Everything is charging and discharging according to the process we have described.

The old Egyptian priest therefore sustains himself for the time being by using the psychic anatomies of those who formerly subscribed to him. Thus, through frequency relationship he draws them into his own consciousness, using their conformities of consciousness contained in their psychic bodies to supplant the higher spiritual Infinite force which should normally flow into him charging or feeding him positively. This same vampirish subastral condition is used not only by old Egyptian priests but is used by many other kinds of personalities who have passed on in a similar downward evolution. In fact these vampires do not confine their activities in the subastral spiritual worlds. They often reach through and obsess individuals living in the flesh through the same frequency relationship. They can even reach through into higher spiritual worlds and drag their unsuspecting victims down into the lower astral worlds. Yes, they even reincarnate into the physical form and live among the earth people.

In history there are very descriptively portrayed classical examples of these vampirish entities such as Hitler, Attila the Hun, Genghis Khan, etc.

It is quite safe to say that some direct influence is maintained with any and all individuals who expressed themselves destructively or who have some destructive potentials hidden in the back reaches of their subconscious psychic anatomy. This is the basic concept of obsession, a very real and dominant factor which affects directly or indirectly the life of every human being now living upon this earth.

The same is true of the past and of the future as well as all other human races wherever they may be found; but do not despair at the portrayal of this obsessive principle, for dynamically posed on the opposite positive side are great suprastral worlds wherein advanced personalities live and work for the common cause of human betterment. Through the same principles used by the subastral agencies, these Suprastral Beings help humanity in an infinite number of ways. In this help they are always wise and judicious. Uppermost in their minds, they carry the cardinal understanding, principle and purpose of human evolution which is that knowledge and wisdom are attained through personal experience which must always be progressively biased.

We can learn of the Infinite only by experiencing the Infinite. In that way, experience polarizes certain energy wave forms in the psychic anatomy which progressively reconstruct the psychic anatomy into a higher, more spiritually evolved form. Therefore, help should never exceed that point where an individual can, as Jesus put it, "pick up his bed and walk", for should the individual depend too much upon outside help he will degenerate, lose his initiative and begin the downward trail; then help becomes destructive.

Mindful of all these facts we have disclosed to you, you can now see the imperative necessity for the desire or will to progressively advance; the desire to acquire knowledge and wisdom which will enable you to live in a higher, more fully-developed consciousness; not for selfish purposes but in an ever-expanding realization of the Infinite and your position as a creative entity of this Infinite.
